Intermundia

Intermundia, kustosko-istraživački projekt, temelji se na istraživanju promjenjivih krajobraških granica trans- i intraeuropskih migracija. Projekt prikazuje slučaj Lampeduse kao metonimije suvremenih „privorskih ujjeta“ na ulasku u „tvrdavu Evropu“. Lampedusa je školski primjer brisanog prostora koji nastaje na geopolitičkim razmedima gdje se formiraju društveno marginalizirane zajednice, bilo da je riječ o pridošlicama ili autohtonom stanovništvu.

U suvremenome trenutku imperativa mobilnosti koji je kompatibilan s imperativom fleksibilnosti rada, prisilna teritorijalna kretanja prekarnih, najčešće visokoobrazovanih, radnika usporedna su s kretanjima, kao i pritvaranjima, ilegalnih migranta. Suvremeni migranti gledaju na se kao na putnike – radnike s privremenim poslovima, koji žive na rubu nesigurnosti, na rubu duga. Ovo ljudsko stanje „negradanina“ ili polugradanina, mora probuditi novu povijesnu svijest.<sup>1</sup>

Nasuprotni promatrani Lampeduse kao rigidne institucije „zatvoreni češkaonica“ – privorske zone u žarištu sukoba, Intermundia nastoji kroz posthumunu perspektivu propitati ambivalentnost „stanja između“ i (ne) mogućnosti kulturnog prijevoda između (imigranata i lokalne otočke zajednice. Projekt nastoji, kroz evokativnu zvučno-svjetlosnu instalaciju te knjižki prezentirano istraživanje, inducirati kod promatrača slojevitо razumijevanje svijeta ili, bolje rečeno, alternativnih svjetova kojih nas okružuju. Kroz efekt očuđenja projekt potiče promatrača na neposrednu reakciju, uranjujući ga u borbu za golji život.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Mediterran bez granica, Sabine Réthoré, 2013. Rad umjetnice prikazuje kartu Sredozemnog mora i priobalnih područja, podvrgnuta dvama jedinstvenim zahtvima: zaokretu od 90 stupnjeva i brišanju nacionalnih granica. Mediterran bez granica nego na geopolitičkoj karti. Više ne prikazatemo tri kontinenta, u borbi za opstanak nego more kojih okuplja zemlje oko sebe. Iz teksta Mediterran bez granica, Léopold Lambert; Ana Dara Beros (vr.), Intermundia, vlast. izd., Zagreb, 2015., 7.

ANA DANA BEROS

Intermundia, a curatorial research project, questions alternating border-scapes of trans-European and intra-European migration. The project depicts the case of Lampedusa as a metonym of contemporary ‘detention conditions’ at the entry to Fortress Europe. Lampedusa is a textbook example of an ‘empty space’ arising at geopolitical crossroads, where socially marginalized communities are being formed, be it newcomers or indigenous population.

In the contemporary moment of the imperative of mobility, which is compatible with the imperative of ‘work flexibility’, the forced territorial migrations of precarious but very often highly educated workers are parallel to the wanderings and detentions of illegal migrants. The modern ‘circulants’ see themselves as itinerants, moving to take temporary jobs, living on the edge of uncertainty, on the edge of debt. This human condition of a ‘denizen’, a half-citizen, a migrant, must propose a new historical consciousness.

Instead of observing the island of Lampedusa as consolidated institution of ‘the waiting room’, as jailed zone in the middle of conflict, Intermundia attempts a post-human perspective in order to investigate the ambivalent state of ‘in-betweenness’ and the (im) possibility of cultural translation. Through an evocative sound and light installation, together with a political narrative presented in a book, the project tries to induce a layered understanding of the world. A layered understanding of the world, or rather, an understanding of the alternative worlds that surround us. Inducing Verfremdungseffekt, the project asks for re-action, and not simply empathy, drowning the observer into a struggle for ‘bare life’.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Mediterranean Without Borders, an artwork by Sabine Réthoré, 2013. It depicts a map of the Mediterranean Sea and its coastal regions that were subjected to two simple operations: a 90-degree tilt that places the North on the right side of the document, and a withdrawal of all lines signifying national borders. The ‘Mediterranean Without Borders’ represents territories that seem optically closer to each other than when considered on a geopolitical map. We can no longer see three continents struggling to exist but, rather, the sea as gathering lands around it. From the text ‘Mediterranean Abyss’ by Léopold Lambert, introduction to Intermundia publication.
