

INTRODUCTION

Dear Readers,

we are proud to present the new issue of the international journal Education for Entrepreneurship. This number includes selected articles from the 7th International Conference on Entrepreneurial Learning (ICEL 7), whose main theme was innovation digital competences in entrepreneurship, as well as other articles (outside the ICEL 7 Conference) that are covering the areas of economics, entrepreneurship, management and education for entrepreneurship.

This journal issue is intended for all those who have a strong interest in thinking of economics as a science and as a profession, especially those who deal with or want to engage in entrepreneurship. The journal gives a special contribution to the academic and professional community by increasing the total theoretical and empirical knowledge from all areas covered by the journal.

In the end, a special thanks to the authors, member of editorial board, reviewers and all other parties involved in the realization of this issue of the journal.

We hope you recognize the effort and work which have been invested and we invite you to submit your work for the future editions of the Education for Entrepreneurship journal.

Editors in chief