

EDITORIAL

Dear readers,

We are glad to share with you volume eight of the InterEULawEast – Journal for the International and European Law, Economics, and Market Integrations. Hopefully, at the time of writing this editorial, it seems that there is a growing number of vaccinated people, and the pandemic is coming to its end. Coming back to normal life means that we have changed some old patterns and everyday life will be definitely different than before at least from the perspective of the academic community. Distance learning, online communication with students and colleagues, digitalization of every aspect of working conditions brought us a number of pros and cons that must be considered. Thanks to our previous efforts and the fact that we have embraced the digitalization of the Journal from the very beginning, we are more than happy that our work and communication with all involved parties: authors, reviewers, technical staff, and readers haven't been jeopardized with a pandemic.

In this issue, we are publishing several interesting scientific papers in the field of law, marketing, and economy. The authors are domestic and foreign with specific emphasis to the authors from east European countries what was the aim from the very beginning. Mainly the topics deal with national and international issues from a comparative perspective.

We do hope that you will enjoy this issue wherever you are but hopefully on your summer vacation.
