AIR FINAL CONFERENCE
19th April 2012
Hotel Helia Budapest

Organised by the team of the project
Addressing Inequalities Interventions in Regions (AIR)

The AIR partners have worked on identifying practices and policies developed to reduce inequalities in primary care settings at regional level in Europe. After identifying and analyzing these practices, the AIR team is proposing recommendations to decision makers and health professionals.

The project began by a systematic review of academic. Then two questionnaires have identified actions which contribute to reduce health inequalities through primary care settings in the regions of the E.U and the specific population targeted in these actions.

Finally the interventions have been selected and analysed. The high standard interventions that have met the evaluation criteria have been scrutinized to identify the “key factors” of success. A catalogue of good practices has been developed and recommendations will be disseminated to the policy makers and health professionals.

The purpose of the AIR final conference is to present the results of the project and examples of interventions, taking into account their efficiency, cost and target population.

This conference will also be an opportunity to discuss the means to reduce health inequalities in Europe as well as to debate the role primary care could play in the reducing of health inequalities.

We hope that decision makers in the field of health, health care and social policy will attend, as well as representatives from national and regional organisations concerned by the issues of health inequalities in primary care.
