

EDITORIAL

Dear Friends and Colleagues,

It is our pleasure to present a new issue of the international scientific journal Inter EU Law East, continuing our commitment to fostering interdisciplinary dialogue and advancing scholarly discussion at the intersection of law and economics. In a period marked by rapid technological development, geopolitical uncertainty, sustainability challenges, and evolving regulatory frameworks, the need for high-quality academic research and critical analysis remains more important than ever.

This issue brings together ten scientific contributions authored by researchers and practitioners from a diverse range of countries and academic backgrounds. The published papers address contemporary legal and economic challenges from both European and global perspectives. The diversity of the contributions once again confirms the Journal's international character and interdisciplinary orientation. The issue features authors from various European countries as well as Asia, reflecting the growing global reach of the Journal and its ability to attract research addressing complex legal and economic questions from multiple jurisdictions and perspectives. The published papers combine theoretical analysis with practical implications, contributing both to academic debate and to the development of policy and practice.

We are particularly pleased that this issue coincides with several important developments in the Journal's continued growth. InterEULawEast has recently been included in the Web of Science Core Collection – Emerging Sources Citation Index (ESCI), representing an important milestone in the Journal's international visibility and recognition.

We are equally delighted to welcome two distinguished scholars, Başak Başoğlu Kapanıcı and Pascal Favrod-Coune, to the Editorial Board. Their expertise and international experience will further strengthen the Journal's academic profile and support its future development.

We extend our sincere gratitude to all authors, reviewers, Editorial Board members, and collaborators whose dedication, professionalism, and scholarly excellence have contributed to the preparation of this issue.

We invite our readers to explore the contributions presented in this issue and hope that they will serve as a valuable source of knowledge, inspiration, and further research.

Warm regards,
