

Suvremena lingvistika

GODINA 36, SVEZAK 1
BROJ 69
ZAGREB 2010

Izdavač: Hrvatsko filološko društvo

Suizdavač: Zavod za lingvistiku Filozofskoga fakulteta u Zagrebu

Urednički savjet: Zagrebački lingvistički krug Hrvatskoga filološkog društva

Glavna urednica:

Ida Raffaelli (Odsjek za lingvistiku)

Suurednik ovog broja:

Ranko Matasović (Odsjek za lingvistiku)

Izvršna urednica:

Mislava Bertoša (Odsjek za lingvistiku)

Uredništvo:

Zrinka Jelaska (Odsjek za kroatistiku)

August Kovačec (Odsjek za romanistiku)

Milan Mihaljević (Staroslavenski institut)

Vesna Muhvić-Dimanovski (Zavod za lingvistiku)

Velimir Piškorec (Odsjek za germanistiku)

Josip Silić

Marko Tadić (Odsjek za lingvistiku)

Međunarodno uredništvo:

Samir Bajrić (Université Paris Sorbonne – Paris IV, Francuska)

Wayles Browne (Cornell University, SAD)

Hubert Cuyckens (Catholic University of Leuven, Belgija)

Martin Haspelmath (Max Planck Institut für evolutionäre Anthropologie, Leipzig, Njemačka)

Tracy Holloway King (NLTT/ISL, SAD)

Roland Marti (Universität des Saarlandes, Njemačka)

Günter Radden (Universität Hamburg, Njemačka)

Oliver Soutet (Université Paris Sorbonne – Paris IV, Francuska)

Robert Van Valin (Heinrich Heine Universität, Düsseldorf, Njemačka)

Björn Wiemer (Universität Konstanz, Njemačka)

Stefan Zimmer (Universität Bonn, Njemačka)

Tajnici:

Marina Grubišić (Odsjek za anglistiku)

Kristian Novak (Odsjek za germanistiku)

Korektor: Branko Erdeljac

UDK i ključne riječi: Irena Kolbas

Slog: Durieux, Zagreb

Tisk: Zrinski d.d., Čakovec

Adresa uredništva:

Zavod za lingvistiku, Filozofski fakultet, Ivana Lučića 3, 10000 Zagreb

e-mail: suvlin@ffzg.hr

<http://suvlin.ffzg.hr>

Ovaj je broj tiskan uz financijsku potporu Ministarstva znanosti, obrazovanja i športa Republike Hrvatske

SADRŽAJ

ZNANSTVENI RADOVI

DIANA FORKER

- 1 Variation in stem formation in Tsezic languages

TENA GNJATOVIĆ

- 21 Effects of (in)alienability on the expression of possessive relations in the language of Plautus' plays

FREDERIK KORTLANDT

- 37 Glottalization and tonogenesis in Athabaskan, Balto-Slavic and Germanic

VITTORIO S. TOMELLERI

- 45 Slavic-style aspect in the Caucasus

RANKO MATASOVIĆ

- 65 Kabardian causatives, reflexives, and case marking domains

PRIKAZI, OCJENE, OSVRTI

- 99 Vladimir Anić: Naličje kalupa / Sabrani spisi
(Branka Tafra)

- 107 Vesna Požgaj-Hadži i dr.: Med politiko in stvarnostjo. Jezikovna situacija v novonastalih državah bivše Jugoslavije
(Aleksandra Ščukanec)

- 113 Milica Gačić: Riječ do riječi (lingvistička istraživanja odnosa engleskog i hrvatskog jezika na području prava i srodnih disciplina)
(Ljubica Kordić)

- 117 Robert D. Van Valin, Jr (ur.): Investigations of the Syntax–Semantic–Pragmatic Interface
(Anita Skelin Horvat)

- 123 Gitte Kristiansen i René Dirven (ur.): Cognitive Sociolinguistics: Language Variation, Cultural Models, Social Systems
(Marina Grubišić)

Foreword

Comparative linguistics is a discipline that seeks to answer some fundamental questions about language: why do languages differ to the extent that they do, and why are some languages more similar, in particular respects, than others? What are the limits to linguistic diversity, and what are the relevant parameters that define it? How do genetic, areal and typological factors contribute to global linguistic diversity, and how do these factors interact? We are only slowly beginning to understand the proper ways of addressing these questions, and we are still very far from having plausible answers to them, but the spectacular development of all branches of comparative linguistics (i.e. typological, areal, and genetic linguistics) give us hope that eventually the answers will be found.

The five papers contained in the present volume of Suvremena lingvistika certainly do not address these important and far-fetched questions directly, but they illustrate the wide application of methods of contemporary comparative linguistics, and show how comparative approach to linguistic phenomena sheds new light on problems in historical, descriptive, and theoretical linguistics. Diana Forker presents us with an important empirical contribution to the understanding of nominal morphology of the Tsezic branch of Nakh-Daghestanian languages, many of which have been inadequately described in the past. Parallels are drawn with similar morphological patterns in Dravidian languages, but the Tsezic system of nominal stem formation remains very unusual from the typological point of view. Tena Gnijatović's article shows how insights into the opposition of alienable vs. inalienable possession, which is grammaticalized in many non-Indo-European languages, help us understand pragmatic preferences in the employment of possessive adjectives and possessive genitives in Plautine Latin. Frederik Kortlandt's paper on tonogenesis shows that important issues in historical Baltic and Slavic accentology can be better understood if one looks at the development of tone oppositions in Athabaskan languages. The present writer's contribution is a description of the causative construction in Kabardian, a NW Caucasian language, and of the ways in which this construction interacts with reflexivization. It attempts to show the relevance of Kabardian data to the theoretical issues of the status of independent NPs in head-marking languages, and the universal domain of case assignment. Finally, Vittorio Tomelleri's paper on aspectology shows the striking parallels between the aspectual system of Ossetic, an Iranian language spoken on the Caucasus, and the better-known Slavic aspectual systems. The relevance of these similarities for diachronic typology of aspectual systems, as well as for the linguistic prehistory of Slavic, should not be underestimated.

It is hoped that this small collection of articles will contribute towards attracting more scholars to the comparative approach to languages, especially the small and endangered languages that need to be studied now, before they become extinct. Unless comparative linguists do their share of work today, tomorrow there may be nothing left to compare.

Zagreb, June 10, 2010

Ranko Matasović