PUBLISHING ETHICS OF THE JOURNAL
The Journal follows the highest ethical and professional standards. Plagiarism and other unacceptable forms of behaviour within the academic community shall not be tolerated under any account. All papers submitted for publication in the Journal shall be checked for whether they are plagiarised, whether the rules of consistent citation have been observed, and the author(s)’ own judgements and conclusions stated separately.

The following actions will be treated as plagiarism:
• Fabricating research findings, making them up and presenting them as factual;
• Manipulating research procedures, deliberate change or omission of data;
• Claims on else’s results, attitudes or judgments as their own, without mentioning sources from which they were taken;
• Abuse of objects or materials of the research, attempt to cover up possible violations of ethical guidelines, fabricated representation of interests, breaching of confidentiality.

Only unpublished manuscripts shall be accepted. Acceptance of categorized paper for publishing obliges the author not to publish the same article elsewhere without the permission of the Journal’s editorial board.

When producing their papers, authors must respect the plurality of ideas and approaches, exclude any kind of hate speech or discrimination on any ground and avoid conflicts of interest in all forms. Papers that do not comply with these criteria will not be considered for publication.
