PUBLICATION ETHICS AND MALPRACTICE STATEMENT

The Editorial Board of the scientific journal Senjski zbornik: prilozi za geografiju, etnologiju, gospodarstvo, povijest i kulturu / The anthology of Senj: contributions to geography, ethnology, economy, history and culture / Jahrbuch: Beiträge zur Geographie, Ethnologie, Ökonomik, Geschichte und Kultur focuses on maintaining, preserving, and safeguarding the integrity of the publishing process as one of the basic elements of the academic work and scientific research. This Publication Ethics and Malpractice Statement serves as a guideline for all editors, reviewers, authors, researchers, and readers regarding the position of the Editorial Board and the Journal on the ethical and legal implications of publishing new scientific ideas.

The Journal has an Editorial Board, consisting of eminent Croatian and international scholars. Besides the Editorial Board, the Journal has Editor-in-Chief and three International Editors who are day-to-day committed to the Journal. Names, titles, and affiliations of members of the Editorial Board, as well as relevant contact information of the Editor-in-Chief and managing editors can be found at: https://hrcak.srce.hr/upute/board_en_Senjski_zbornik.pdf.

The Editor-in-Chief and the Editorial Board assume responsibility for all content published in the Journal.

The anthology of Senj: contributions to geography, ethnology, economy, history and culture is owned and published by Senj Museum Society and Senj Town Museum. Publishers maintain regular publishing schedule once a year. Publication of the Journal is possible through the financial support of the Ministry of Science and Education of the Republic of Croatia.

1. Authors and Authors responsibilities

When submitting an article for publishing in this journal, the authors are obliged to participate in peer review process. Authors' manuscripts of original research should present an accurate account of the work performed as well as an objective discussion of its significance. A paper should contain sufficient detail and references to permit others to replicate the work. Knowingly inaccurate statements constitute unethical behaviour are unacceptable.

When submitting their article for publication in this journal, the authors confirm the statement that all data in article are real and authentic. Authors should be prepared to provide the raw data in connection with a paper for editorial review. The authors should ensure that they have written entirely original works, and if the authors have used the work and/or words of others that this has been appropriately cited or quoted. Plagiarism or self-plagiarism in all its forms constitutes unethical publishing behaviour and is unacceptable. If the plagiarism problem is detected, the Editorial Board will notify the corresponding author and prevent the work from being published in this journal.

An author should not publish manuscripts describing essentially the same research in more than one journal or primary publication. Submitting the same manuscript to more than one journal concurrently constitutes unethical publishing behaviour and is unacceptable.

Proper acknowledgment of the work of others must always be given. Authors should cite publications that have been influential in determining the nature of the reported work. Every manuscript submitted to this journal should be formatted and have a proper list of references to cited articles according to the Guidance for references.

Authorship should be limited to those who have made a significant contribution to the conception, design and interpretation of the reported study. All those who have made significant contributions should be listed as co-authors.

Any issues regarding the sources of research funding, external pressures, and potential conflict of interest by the authors need to be visibly declared. When an author discovers a significant error or inaccuracy in his/her own published work, it is the author's obligation to promptly notify the journal editor or publisher and cooperate with the editor to retract or correct the paper.

All information regarding the submission of the article, including the technical information on formatting and all other guidelines, can be easily found on the website or in the Journal itself.

2. Peer-review process

All submitted manuscripts are read by the editorial staff. All of a journal's content is subjected to peer-review. To save time for authors and peer-reviewers, only those papers that seem most likely to meet the editorial criteria are sent for formal review - without exception to two reviewers. Any manuscripts received for review must be treated as confidential documents. They must not be shown to or discussed with others except as authorized by the editor.

All articles undergo two double-blind peer reviews. The Editorial Board finds referees who read the language the article is written in and who are capable of reviewing its relevance and originality. Before sending, the editorial staff removes names and affiliations under the title within the manuscript and make sure figures do not contain any affiliation related identifier, removing any identifying information, including author names from file names and ensure document properties are also anonymized. Then the articles are sent to peer-reviewers with Guidelines for reviewers. The period between manuscript submission and the first feedback from reviewers is an average of 30 days. Reviews should be conducted objectively, and their judgments should be objective. Personal criticism of the author is inappropriate. Referees should express their views clearly with supporting arguments.

It is less common for the journal to receive two different recommendations from the referees, with one suggesting minor revision or acceptance and the other suggesting rejection. In case of contradictory reviews, the manuscript is sent to a third reviewer. At the end of each round of revision, when the Editorial Board sends decisions to the authors, they usually comment on the referee reports, guiding authors in what needs to be reworked.

Privileged information or ideas obtained through peer review must be kept confidential and not used for personal advantage. Reviewers should not consider manuscripts in which they have conflicts of interest with respect to the research, the authors and/or the research funders resulting from competitive, collaborative, or other relationships or connections with any of the authors, companies, or institutions connected to the papers.

The final decision is made by the Editorial Board. Manuscripts lacking in content or value are turned down without being sent to reviewers.

3. Publication ethics

The Editorial Board is obliged to monitoring/safeguarding publishing ethics in the review process. Editors, publisher, and all others involved in the publishing process will take all the necessary steps to identify and prevent any misconduct before the publication of the article. In case of noticing any unethical behaviour in the review process, errors, or omissions, anyone should report it to the editor or the publisher who are responsible on solving the issue.

Minor misconduct might be dealt with between the editor and the author, without the need to consult more widely. In any event, the author should be given the opportunity to respond to any allegations. If the author responds and is willing to correct the misconduct, the review process may continue. In case of serious misconduct, the editor should notify the author, and withdraw the paper from the further procedure of the review process. If the paper is already published, the withdrawal notification should be published at the web page of the journal, sent to author, and in some serious cases the employers of the accused should be notified.

The Editorial Board should always be willing to publish corrections, clarifications, retractions and apologies when needed (immediately via website and at the earliest possible opportunity in the printed journal), and allow no plagiarism, or fraudulent data. The Editorial Board supports the publication of any corrections, clarifications, retractions, expressions of concern, and apologies regarding the papers published in the Journal.

The Editorial Board shall constantly strive to improve the quality of the Journal, with a particular focus on transparency, to ensure the quality of the published materials.

4. Copyright and access

Copyright of the articles is held by the publishers and the author(s). In case of future reprints of the published article in other publications, the author has the duty to request permission from the Editorial Board of the Journal. All reprints need to contain a remark pointing to exact issue and number of the Journal in which the paper was originally published. In case of the reprint made by third parties, the permissions need to be requested and acquired both from the Editorial Board as well as the author(s).
