

Citation and references

Authors can use the Oxford or Chicago citation style. An author should use only one citation style in his/her paper. Authors using the Oxford citation style, in which the reference unit should be fully stated in the footnote when first mentioned, do not need to submit a separate reference list. If the next footnote refers to the same unit, then the abbreviation »ibid.« should be used, followed by the corresponding page number. If a unit is mentioned repeatedly, but not successively, then it is written in an abbreviated form (last name, page number). When multiple papers by the same author are mentioned again, then one only needs to write the last name, abbreviated title and page number.

The following rules of referencing apply when using the Oxford style:

authored book: Antun Barac, Mažuranić, Zagreb, Matica hrvatska, 1945, p. 100.

chapter in a book or proceedings: Reinhard Lauer, »Vjekovi Ilirije Ivana Mažuranića«, in: Poetika i ideologija, Belgrade, Prosveta, 1987, p. 190.

paper in a journal: Josip Vončina, »Ilirizam i Gundulićev Osman«, Umjetnost riječi, 29, 1, 1985, p. 50 (the first number after the journal's name is the number of the volume, while the second number is the specific issue; if an individual journal has a different way of handling the periodisation – e.g. yearbooks – then this can be pointed out when citing the reference unit).

books or papers with more than one author: if a unit has two or three authors, they are mentioned without inversion (e.g. Stjepan Babić, Božidar Finka, Milan Moguš, Hrvatski pravopis, Zagreb, Školska knjiga, 1996). If a unit has more than three authors, then only the name and surname of the first author are mentioned, followed by the abbreviation »et al.« doctoral dissertation in a manuscript: Ivan Botica, Krbavski knezovi u srednjem vijeku, University of Zagreb, 2011, p. 150.

When citing a reference unit, authors using the Chicago citation style should mention in the body of the text the author's last name, publishing year and the page number where the specific quote can be found (e.g. Barac 1945, 100). If the author's last name is mentioned in the sentence, then it can be omitted. In the list of the referred literature the units are listed in alphabetical order of the (first) author's last name. If the same author has multiple papers with the same publishing year, the units should be listed alphabetically according to the papers' titles, and each unit should be assigned a letter (a, b, c, etc.), after the year. Those units should always be referred to by including those letters in the text (e.g. Barac 1945a, 100; Barac 1945b, 101).

The following rules of citation apply when using the Chicago style:

authored book: Barac, Antun. 1945. Mažuranić. Zagreb: Matica hrvatska.

chapter in a book or proceedings: Lauer, Reinhard. 1987. »Vjekovi Ilirije Ivana Mažuranića«. In: Poetika i ideologija, 100–101. Beograd, Prosveta (numbers before the place of publication refer to the first and last page of a chapter in a book or proceedings, so it is not necessary to add the abbreviation »p./pp.«).

paper in a journal: Vončina, Josip. 1985. »Ilirizam i Gundulićev Osman«. Umjetnost riječi, 29 (1), 49–76 (the number after the journal's title is the volume, while the number in parentheses is the specific issue. If a certain journal has a different way of handling the periodisation, then only the volume is mentioned, followed by the page range of the work after a colon. If the journal does not number volumes but only issues, then is written in parentheses after the journal's title the specific issue, and the page range of the work is written after a colon).

books or papers with more than one author: if a unit has two or three authors, then the first is mentioned inverted, and the rest without inversion (e.g. Babić, Stjepan, Božidar Finka, Milan Moguš. 1996. Hrvatski pravopis. Zagreb: Školska knjiga). If a unit has more than three authors, then only the first and last name of the first author are mentioned, followed by the abbreviation »et al.« The same applies when citing a unit in the body of the text (e.g. Babić, Finka, Moguš 1996, 48).

doctoral dissertation in a manuscript: Botica, Ivan. 2011. Krbavski knezovi u srednjem vijeku. Doctoral dissertation, University of Zagreb.
