Review process

Once the journal's editors receive a submission by email, the author will be notified.

The ensuing review process will decide if the received submission will be published.

Two reviewers will review the submission and if both reviews are positive the submission can be published.

If one or both reviews are negative, the submission is sent back to the author to be modified as recommended by the reviewers.

The chief editor of the journal may allow the publication of a submission regardless of the reviewers' recommendations.

The review process is overseen by the journal's editors.
