About

Filozofska istraživanja (en. Philosophical Investigations) is a scientific journal of the Croatian Philosophical Society based in Zagreb, Republic of Croatia. It is the most important journal of philosophy in the Republic of Croatia and one of the most important journals of philosophy in Southeastern Europe. The journal is known for being open to new ideas, approaches and methodologies, i.e. to different orientations, schools of thought and ways of thinking, including border areas (sociology, natural sciences, religious studies, interdisciplinary studies, etc.), but also to marginalized or unjustly neglected topics.

As an open access journal, Filozofska istraživanja supports the concept of open science and does not charge for its service. All content is freely available to users or their institutions at no charge. Users may read, download, copy, distribute, print, search, link, or use the full texts of the articles for any non-commercial lawful purpose without first obtaining permission from the publisher or author, but must give appropriate credit, provide a link to the license, and indicate if changes were made. You may do so in any reasonable manner, but not in any way that suggests the licensor endorses you or your use.

Filozofska istraživanja has been published regularly since 1980 with four issues per year and exclusively unpublished original papers in Croatian. With the exception of critical reviews and reports, all contributions are subjected to anonymous double-blind peer review and qualify for publication on the basis of two positive reviews.
