The Croatian Journal of Fisheries is a peer-reviewed scientific and technical journal. It was established in 1938 and today possesses a long-term tradition of publishing papers on freshwater and marine fisheries.

Topics covered by the Journal include ichthyology, aquaculture, ecology and diseases of fish and other aquatic organisms, open water issues and other topics related to the fisheries. The Journal features papers which present original research, interpretative content and subject matter of interest to the fisheries profession. The Journal's ethical policies are based on the guidelines and standards of the Committee of Publication Ethics (COPE) and throughout the publication process the Journal will strongly encourage all involved parties (authors, reviewers and editors) to maintain ethical behaviour.
